Nursing is a noble profession, filled with wonderful people, and with the support of each other, you can go on providing great care to vulnerable patients all over the world. Nursing is a truly inspiring and thoroughly rewarding career like no other; however, for all of the amazing things you experience on a daily basis, there are also tough parts to deal with, like stress, long hours and struggling to make time for family. Yet, despite these struggles, nursing is full of exceptional people that do amazing life changing things. As a nurse, every day is different. You never know what is going to happen, and if you ever think you do, something will come along to surprise you. A Nurse must be able to use her knowledge, expertise, and experience to make swift judgement calls. There is no substitute for experience, but knowledge is the key to being able to make good decisions. Read and learn constantly, especially if there are areas for improvement. Not only do you have to constantly keep learning as a nurse, but you also have to be naturally hard-working. Be passionate about what you do, and strive to be the best. Go the extra mile with your patients, and prove to yourself that you are an inspiring person. By doing this for yourself, you'll find it easier to be motivated and those around you will be impressed.
