Market Analysis

A substantial increase in the geriatric population across the globe has strengthened the demand for skilled nursing care services worldwide. The increasing number of patients suffering from Alzheimer's along with high incidence of dementia, a common form of Alzheimer's, is one of the key factors fuelling the growth of global skilled nursing care services market. On the basis of geography, Asia Pacific, North America, Europe, and Rest of the World are the key segments of the global skilled nursing care services market. North America holds the foremost position in the global skilled nursing care services market as an increased awareness about the significance of skilled nursing care services, infrastructural development, provision of reimbursement coverage, and a well-defined regulatory framework are driving the market's growth. On account of the rising prevalence of diseases, the U.S. is the leading country in the North America market. Europe ranks second in the regional segment because of high healthcare expenditure coupled with elevated sense of awareness about these services.

The growth of medical tourism in Asia Pacific will also benefit the market for skilled nursing care services. Some of the key players operating in the global skilled nursing care services market are Lincare, Inc., Apria Healthcare Group Inc., Golden Living, Emeritus Corporation, Genesis Healthcare., Sunrise Senior Living Inc., Sun Healthcare Group Inc., Gentiva, and Life Care Centers of America, Atria, Brookdale Senior Living, and Extencicare, Inc. It is expected that Asia Pacific will exhibit immense opportunities.

As one of the 27 Institutes and Centers at the National Institutes of Health (NIH), the National Institute of Nursing Research (NINR) funds research that establishes the scientific basis for quality patient care. Often working collaboratively with physicians and other researchers, nurse scientists are vital in setting the national research agenda. Nursing research is a critical compliment to biomedical research, as it investigates how to prevent disease and promote healthy living.

NINR's Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 funding level of $146 million is approximately 0.45% of the overall $32.1 billion NIH budget. Spending for nursing research is a modest amount relative to the allocations for other health science institutes and for major disease category funding.
