

Natural medicine: Transiting towards a natural healthcare

Rene Goris

International Oriental College Daoland, EU

Abstract

Natural Medicine at the moment is executed by the hands of individual practitioners or in the format or under the wings of regular medicine organization and sciences. As such a huge neglect is the result of that that has two aspects: the public doesn't have the best kind of health support from the Natural means as well as that a drain of knowledge is happening as a result of falsification of knowledge through re-imagining things to inherently alien scientific models that prioritize other aspects than the natural theory would.

It is time we remodel natural health practice with respect for the inherent theories in the field of language-, research-, educational-development and offering services to the public. There is a need for trans-cultural co-operation to emancipate Natural Medicine and educate the public. From this comes the theme 'Natural medicine: transiting towards a Natural Healthcare'

Biography

Rene Goris has completed his/her PhD in 2006 at the age of 42 years from the Intercultural Open University foundation, USA/Netherlands. He/she is the director/professor of IOC Daoland, EU He/She has over 200 text and video publications that have been cited and copied many times. He is a researcher into fitting educational models for Naturopath Medicine Systems specialized in comparing modern and Chinese Medicine.

11th International Conference on Traditional Medicine and Acupuncture | March 11, 2021

Citation: Rene Goris, Natural medicine: Transiting towards a natural healthcare, Traditional Medicine 2021, 11th International Conference on Traditional Medicine and Acupuncture, March 11, 2021, 04